Objectives
The main objective of the PNR is to drive a revolution for fundamental reform in the Congo by Congolese joining the vision of the movement for political reforms. In doing so effectively, we need to democratically compete for power and exercise it responsibly for bringing needed reforms and improving the quality of life of the Congolese. The PNR therefore aims to:

- safeguard the territorial integrity, and the stability of democratically established institutions;
- put an end to the culture of corruption, impunity, social injustice rooted in Congolese poverty;
- promote respect for the common goods and establish the culture of work, merit, sacrifice, patriotism, positive competition and solidarity;
- promote talent, spirit of creativity, entrepreneurship and needed initiatives to build a strong competitive economy and a prosperous Congo;
- develop social welfare activities for widows and orphans of members or officers of public order who fell under the national flag;
- build military hospitals and decent barracks housing for the women and men in uniform and;
- establish a scholarship system for those who have served under the national flag (regular army or popular self-defense forces);
- eradicate selfishness and social divisions that make our country one of the poorest people of our world with the richest natural resources in our universe;
- create jobs for eradicating social insecurity in Congo;
- reform the army and security services to secure our borders and ensure the safety of persons and their properties;
- involve all Congolese to become cautious and work on bringing security in the country.

Doctrine
The PNR is the doctrine of reformism based on the awakening of the people, the awareness of change in the mindset that must start from the goodwill of all by the Congolese as central point to any reforms. We believe that Congolese need first to change before considering reconstruction and development of the Congo.

Ideology
There can be no major actions that are not based on a great ideology, a concrete vision of what is intended as a result of actions or conduct.

...Ideology, cont’d
The ideology of reform of the PNR is based on the change for national renewal. This ideology is based on the vision of great ideas and ambitions of actions to reform the Congo by taking into account the needs of the Congolese people and not of the greedy politicians.

Organizational structure of the PNR
- Two central bodies: National Congress (Supreme branch) and National Council (Executive branch);
- Five regional representations in the Diaspora (Europe, America, Africa, Asia and Oceania);
- Grassroots’ bodies at Provincial Council, Urban, Territorial, Municipal, Vicinal, local level; as well as local grassroots or sectorial Units such as Youth and Moms Sections in each city or village.

Mission
Together for reform, democracy, and prosperity.

Mission Statement
Our vision for reforming the bad political practices in the Congo (DRC) aims at a fundamental change of the current dysfunctional governance system in order to improve the lives of Congolese people, restoring lasting peace, and rebuilding national infrastructures.

This revolutionary political movement is dedicated to taking back our great country for the Congolese People.
Our Motivation
Social conditions and suffering of people forced us to politically seek for the rebirth (the renaissance) of the Congo, and for improving the living conditions of Congolese people on its entire territory.

Our Call...
Congo belongs to us all, and it is our civic responsibility to get it out of this current situation. We owe it to our country and our children. We should not just settle for the status quo of our mismanaged national wealth. We need to stand for the Congo as our national anthem (Debout Congolais) challenges all of us to do so!

Why the PNR?
A united, stable, strong and prosperous Congo, free and sovereign Congo requires a new political vision with a new leadership eager to transform the country in the image of its resources for national dignity and in the spirit of our ancestors' aspirations and wants. The people's misery, the country's roads and basic infrastructures degradation due to the lack of good governance challenges anyone and everyone who really loves this great and mismanaged country to stand and fight for its renewal. The outside bursting pressures due to envy of the Congolese people, found it imperative to create the PNR in order to reform the bad political practices in Congo and re-establish democratic values and principles for improving social conditions of the people.

Aware of the need to politically organize the people for deep reforms to meet the challenges of our times and expectations of the Congolese people, the need to reinforce national institutions with democratic, stable principles based on universal values of good governance, we, the Congolese people, found it imperative to create the PNR in order to reform the bad political practices in Congo and re-establish democratic values and principles for improving social conditions of the people.

Our Alternative to the problems
Politics must cease to be mere agitation for power and greed without any plans or vision for meeting the needs of our times of rebuilding the country's infrastructures and improving social conditions of long abandoned Congolese people. The reform promoted by the PNR focuses on the radical changes of bad political practices for the dignity of all and make this country a safe and better place to live and raise the children.

Thus, the PNR has a creative reform plan for modernizing the government services in order to embrace the new technologies that have become indispensable for the development of any country in the 21st century.

The PNR will therefore
- improve accessibility and quality of public services in Congo;
- promote participative democracy and transparency in public management;
- modernize the financial sector and management of public companies to increase national revenues in order to initiate or promote projects that create jobs and thereby ensure the minimum living conditions for all (food, health, drinking water, education, clothing, housing, and electricity);
- streamline the bureaucracy and put an end to the culture of power abuse and corruption;
- modernize the communications system to reduce the excessive cost due to lack of modern telecommunications infrastructure in Congo;
- promote efficiency and effectiveness in management of government programs (education, research, health, forest management, military and national security, transportation, culture, tourism, agriculture etc...) using new technological tools;
- redefine national salary policy to better fight corruption and poverty at its roots;
- establish a policy for stimulating private investors (both domestic and foreign) in all sectors as well as in the field of new technologies, current engine of socioeconomic development of the 21st century;
- establish a system for assessing the impact and performance of governmental programs for transparency and accountability and make them available and accessible online to every Congolese and foreign partners.

The PNR has a vision for bringing needed changes in Congo by reforming the methods of governance and integrating technological solutions in public sector. Together, a reform is possible in Congo because the happiness of Congolese depends on the goodwill of the Congolese themselves.

Those reforms are prerequisite to the national efforts for rebuilding and developing our country. Together, we can put an end to the status quo of the current dysfunctional system characterized by horrible political practices where rampant corruption, theft, and misappropriations of public funds have drained the Congolese people of their birthright.

There are several ways to support or become involved in this national movement for reform. You can become part of the much needed reform in the Congo by:
- adhering to the movement as a member or a fan;
- contributing financially or morally;
- becoming a volunteer to help raising awareness and/or conducting fundraising efforts; or
- indicating how you would like to participate or support this cause for reform in Congo.

Why get involved?
Together, ordinary citizens can put an end to the bad political practices that are at the heart of the misery of the Congolese people. God blessed us with an extremely rich country but poorly governed. If you are not happy with the way the country is ran as we are, then let us work together to reform things, to bequeath for the future generations of a beautiful, prosperous and glorious Congo where we can all enjoy living and raising our children. It is our historic time to stand up and assume our responsibility.

Ideological Values of the flag colors:
- The Green for Fundamental Reform
- The White for Peace and Security
- The Blue for Democracy and Freedom
- The Red for the Blood of our Martyrs and Heroes

Emblems of the PNR:
- The circle symbolizes the Congo as an indivisible; the flower is for the promotion of agriculture as the foundation of the development;
- The three lines are for the renaissance of the DRC indicating how you would like to participate or support the movement as a member or a fan;
- The three lines are for the renaissance of the DRC with new generations.
